

286

Maximian become emperor in West while Diocletian was in East

Caracausius revolted in Britain

April 286

Maximian was made Augustus - emperor with Diocletian

His wife was Eutropia
Children: son, Marcus Valerius Maxentius
daughter, Fausta,
stepdaughter, Theodora

1 Apr 286

Diocletian had Maximian raised to rank of Augustus. Diocletian retained a veto on all major policy issues.

He was loyal to Diocletian and able colleague, so we have a relationship of trust instead of bitter rivalry.

Mormon suppressed the BAGAUDAE, powerful robber-bands of displaced peasants who were wrecking havoc in parts of Gaul. One of their leaders AMANDUS, had the audacity to assume the imperial title.

286-305

mejoración de empresa

286 AD

The emperor DIOCLETIAN split the Roman Empire into eastern and Western branches, in part to better defend Italy from tribes pressing in from the north. The eastern empire flourished.

Maximian, Augustus in the west.

286-305

Maximianus, Co-Augustus

286 → 305

van? died 310

MAXIMIAN - Chosen by Diocletian to rule as emperor with Diocletian

Maximian's son was MAXENTIUS

286 AD

Diocletianus and MAXIMIANUS were emperors

286, 287, 288, 289, 290

Diocletian spent 5 seasons campaigning on the Danube and eastern frontiers.

286

Serious trouble developed. Carausius, Commander of the Roman North Sea Fleet seized control of Britain and pronounced himself emperor